TURN IN WALSH SUIT

Colorado Miner Would Stop Chorus Girls' Testimony.

JOHN G. CARLISLE HER LAWYER

Clintons Walsh Settled with Girl for $6,000, Leaving Him Loser of 40 Per Cent Contingent Fee—Suits Result in Attempt to Disbar Attorney Hansen—Some Allegations.

New York, June 6.—The litigation involving Thomas F. Walsh, the mining man, of Colorado, Violet Watson, a chorus girl, appearing in "Fascinating Flora" at the Casino, Dethiel C. Hansen, a lawyer, now under threat of disbarment, and John G. Carlisle, ex-Secretary of the Treasury, took a new phase to-day when it was learned that application is to be made to the Supreme Court by counsel for Walsh to have set aside a previous order for the examination of the Watson girl in connection with suits brought against her and Walsh by Hansen to recover a large sum of money.

Violet Watson became the wife, some time ago, of James H. Mansfield, known in the bucket shop trade as "Red Letter Mansfield," because of the peculiar daily letters he used to send out before he was closed up a few years ago. In September, 1904, through John G. Carlisle, her counsel, she began suit against Walsh, accusing him of having betrayed her while she was under the age of consent. The woman, who is twenty-four years old now, was, six years ago, known as Violet N. Villiers, and the board of health's records show that she gave the name of the father to her child as Thomas F. W. Villiers. His residence she gave as 34 Rue de Lorraine, Paris, and his business as "Manager, Standard Oil."

Woman Settles for $6,000.

The suit was begun in her name by the service of a summons by Hansen, who took the case on a contingent fee of 40 per cent. But she was soon induced to drop the suit, and now says that she got $6,000 cash from a representative of Walsh. Meanwhile Hansen had retained Carlisle as counsel, and he also advised Hansen that a discontinuance should be entered. Hansen denies that he understood Carlisle to do this, and it was because he persisted in representing to the Supreme Court that Carlisle was still acting as counsel, and that the suits had not been settled, that disbarment proceedings were begun against him, through the influence of Nielson Anable and Lindsay, counsel for Walsh.

When orders of discontinuance in the Watson girl's suits were finally entered by order of Justice MacCall, Hansen started three suits of his own against both the woman and Walsh, claiming 40 per cent of the total claim in each suit. There were three suits altogether, one for $25,000, one for $10,000, and one for $6,000, and Hansen asked for 40 per cent of each claim, on the theory that she might have recovered the full amount in each case, and that her settlement of the claims without consulting him was in deprivation of his rights. The suit involved alleged promises by Walsh to support the girl for life, and claims for damages for personal injuries.

Walsh Calls Suit Blackmail.

Walsh has always denounced the suits as blackmailing schemes, and denies vigorously all the charges against him. Hansen maintained that he had letters and verbal statements from the girl that showed she was telling the truth, to a certain extent, at least. Hansen submitted an affidavit to the Supreme Court in which he reiterated the charges, but this was ordered stricken from the records as scandalous.

In it he said, and has since repeated in the disbarment proceedings against him, that the Watson woman had satisfied him by various kinds of proof that she had been wronged by Walsh, who had met her first in Paris when she was a schoolgirl, and when he was acting as the representative of King Leopold of Belgium. She said, Hansen declared, that Walsh had pretended a great interest in her, had adopted her as his ward, and had induced her to come to this country to live under his care. She was born in Paris of English parents, and is said to be a rather attractive looking young woman.

The disbarment proceedings against Hansen were referred by the appellate division to E. J. McGuire, whose report is now before that court for consideration. Mr. McGuire has reported that while undoubtedly Hansen acted in an unprofessional manner, in trying to force the girl to prosecute her suits, and afterward to deceive the Supreme Court into the belief that she had not agreed to discontinue them, yet his actions were instigated rather by lack of wisdom and experience than from any deliberate attempt to defraud the court.

Hansen Sues for Defamation.

Meanwhile Hansen has been trying to push his suit to trial, and with this view got an order for the examination before the trial of Violet Watson. He expects to get enough testimony from her to enable

CAT SERENADES CARDINAL.

Feline Makes Night Hideous in Front of Archbishop's Residence.

Baltimore, June 6.—The wailing of a cat near the residence of Cardinal Gibbons at 11 o'clock last night attracted the attention of the policeman who guards the home of his eminence and a number of pedestrians, who were for a long time puzzled as to the location of the sound. It was finally learned that the cries came from the top of a tall tree in front of the north window of the residence, near the Charles street side of the house; but the problem of getting pussy down was enough to stump an athlete, as the tree was tall, with no branches near the ground. Several persons tried to climb it, and failed.

The cat had ensconced herself in a crotch of the limbs about forty feet from the ground and was evidently too frightened to respond to any of the invitations to come down and be good. Meanwhile the appealing "mew" rang in the air. Finally, about 12 o'clock a boy with tough shins climbed the tree and brought the cardinal's nocturnal visitor to earth.

Origin of Alleged Americanisms.

Source Laid in Scotland.

The accepted manner of defining Americanisms, either male or female, in the London comic papers, or in second-rate English novels, is to label their speech plentifully with "calculate" and "guess," and with "well" at the opening of each sentence. This mode of marking, or any other, is in itself totally unimportant, but linguistically it is not without interest, for while it is purely conventional as now used and has no relation to any American habits of the present day, whether good or bad, it is pleasant to note that the hard-worked insular humorists need not have gone so far afield to find the words necessary for the identification of Americans. They really had but to turn to the "New Letters" of Thomas Carlyle (vol. I, p. 178) and there read the following sentence: "He has brought you a Fox's Book of Martyrs, which I calculate will go in the parcel to-day; you will get right good reading out of it, I guess."

ANARCHIST TRIAL NEAR END.

Defendants Accused of Complicity in Attack on Spanish Rulers.

Madrid, June 6.—The taking of evidence in the case of Senor Ferrer, principal of the modern school of Barcelona, Jose Nakens, editor of El Motion, and five others, charged with complicity in the attempt to assassinate the King and Queen on their wedding day, was finished to-day.

The public prosecutor will speak tomorrow. He announces that he will ask for a modification of the sentence, he first demanded, which was sixteen years imprisonment for Ferrer and ten years for the others.

Ferrer denied that anarchistic doctrine was taught at his school. Only the principles of internationalism, he said, were taught there. He was not an anarchist. Only the ultramontanes believed the contrary.

TRY TO BURN ALLENTOWN.

Incendiaries Start Three Fires, Causing Loss of $125,000.

Allemtown, Pa., June 6.—What was apparently an effort of incendiaries to destroy the city of Allemtown occurred here early to-day, when firemen were called almost simultaneously to fight three fires in the business section of the city.

An effort was made to draw the firemen from the business section by turning in a false alarm from a remote residential section of the city. The total loss is estimated at $125,000.

The police have arrested three suspects. They are Oliver Liebenguth, William Liebenguth, and Oscar Schwank. The first named has a long jail record, and only a week ago escaped from a Bethlehem (Pa.) constable while under arrest.

BRYAN HITS AT WALL STREET

Addresses New York Board of Transportation on Railroads.

Comments Roosevelt, but Intimates that the President is Only Adopting Bryan's Views.

New York, June 6.—Many well-known merchants crowded the New York Board of Transportation rooms to-day to hear William J. Bryan speak on financial, industrial, and railroad conditions.

Mr. Bryan commended the President for his advocacy of Federal regulation of the railroads, and intimated, as he has done before, that the President had seen fit to adopt the Bryan doctrine.

He denounced speculation in Wall street, saying that it was but another form of gambling, and that the man "who bankrupts the railroad or gets hold of them to squeeze out some one else is a financier."

"The railroads," said Mr. Bryan, "must exist. The country cannot get along without them. But we cannot permit great corporations to prey on society without regulation. The people will never deal as unjustly with the railroads as the railroads have with the people."

"I differ with the President when he says that generally the railroads are not overcapitalized. So long as the railroads refuse to allow their real value to become known just so long must suspicion rest on them that the value on paper is in excess of the value on the ground."

"I resent this cry of confiscation against the farmers of the West and the toilers of your own city. I raise it against the men who take millions in the name of high finance. Treat the farmer fairly. He is the foundation on which is reared the structure of society. Give him the money in exchange for his commodities, and don't permit it to be taken out of the country to be expended in the purchase of titles of broken-down princes."

Mr. Bryan declared that the purchasing value of the dollar was 30 per cent less than it was ten years ago.

Enthusiasm ran high up at the Fifteenth Assembly District Democratic Club when the "peerless one" was introduced.

Mr. Bryan smiled pleasantly on meeting the rank and file. He then launched into an address that started with a comparison of Hamilton and Jefferson, spread all over the country of his travels in describing what Jefferson had done for democracy, and included the explanation that, although the money question of 1896 was now a dead issue, its outcome was really a victory for the Democratic party.

HAS SCHEME TO CURB TRUSTS

New York Lawyer Submits Plan to President Roosevelt.

Would Take Matter Out of Hands of Interstate Commerce Commission and Other Agencies.

A scheme for regulating corporations by means of a judge and jury, instead of by the Interstate Commerce Commission and other machinery in use at present, has been presented to the President by John R. Dos Passos, a lawyer of New York. The essential features of the scheme in the words of the author are:

"First—The act, contract, or combination must be injurious to the public. This meets an objection to the Sherman law, which, it has always been argued with more or less force, assails all commercial combinations, whether reasonable or unreasonable."

"Second—The act, contract, or combination must be passed on by a jury. This is where the subject legitimately belongs. It primarily should be left to the people to decide whether certain acts are injurious to their welfare or not. Heretofore these questions have been left to the judges. It was too great a burden for the judiciary."

"Third—The proceeding under this act (the act proposed by Mr. Dos Passos) is summary. No one will hereafter recklessly defy the law. If he does, forfeiture and sure punishment await him. It is generally provided that all acts, combinations, &c., against interstate trade or commerce are illegal. It is left to the jury to determine what acts are injurious, and to the judge to decide whether they fall within the commerce clause of the Constitution."

In concluding his letter to the President, Mr. Dos Passos says:

"Mr. President, I am not unconscious that in making these suggestions I am doing real service to the people of the United States. If they need additional enforcement from legal or historical sources, I shall feel it my duty to lend you further aid."

WEATHER CONDITIONS.

U. S. Dept. of Agriculture, Weather Bureau.

Washington, Thursday, June 6, 1907—4 p. m.

A barometric depression that has crossed the Rocky Mountains Thursday and is now central in Western Kansas. It has caused scattered showers in the Dakotas, Iowa, Kansas, Nebraska, and Central Illinois. In Eastern districts fair weather has prevailed, except in Northern New England and Northern New York, where rain has fallen. There has been a rise in temperature in all districts east of the Mississippi. In the Middle Mississippi Valley and the Dakotas temperatures have fallen, due to the rain.

The weather in Atlantic Coast States will be fair Friday, with higher temperature. In the interior valleys and the Lake States showers are probable. Showers are indicated for Saturday in Atlantic coast districts, with little change in temperature, except that which is caused by the rain. In the West fair weather is indicated, with summer temperatures.

The winds along the New England and Middle Atlantic coasts will be from the south on the South Atlantic and East Gulf coasts fresh southerly; on the West Gulf coast fresh southerly; on the Lower Lakes fresh southerly, and on the Upper Lakes increasing southerly.

Steamers departing Friday for European ports will have light to fresh westerly winds and fair weather to the Grand Banks.

ORBY IS AFTER KING'S CUP

Croker's Great Three-year-old to Run in Irish Derby.

Will Race Best Horses in Britain for a Special Trophy Offered by Edward VII.

London, June 6.—Added honors are in store for Richard Croker and his great Derby winner Orby. The Irish Derby, for three-year-olds, which is run at the Leopardstown course in Ireland, will, it is now declared, be the scene of another great turf event to be sponsored by the King, who will offer a handsome gold cup as the incentive for the entrance of the best three-year-old in training.

Mr. Croker will readily enter Orby for the race, and he is quoted as saying that the winning of an Irish Derby would give him as much pleasure, if not satisfaction, as did the winning of the classic English turf event.

Orby came out of the running of the Derby fresh and as playful as a kitten. Indicating the immense reserve power contained in the wonderful racer, Mr. Croker directed that the animal be given every attention, and before joining his friends in the celebration which followed the victory gave personal attention to directing the nature of the care and attention which Orby should receive.

When Mr. Croker, two years ago, was allowed to train his horse over the Newmarket course while English owners were thus being favored, he declared that that Newmarket was not indispensable to the training of a Derby winner.

"Lord Rothschild asked me," said Mr. Croker, "and if I happened that he did not find himself a disadvantage in not being able to train Orby over the Newmarket course, 'where I trained the colt. I told him that I had a bit of a cabbage patch in Ireland, where Orby received his training, and that I thought that my patch was the equal of half a dozen Newmarkets, particularly if one had an Irish-American horse to train."

There is a disposition among certain sections of the press with jealous propensities to interpret Mr. Croker's failure to receive an invitation to the King's Derby dinner last night as a direct royal snub. It is contended that it is customary for the owner of the winning horse to receive such an invitation, and that when Mr. Whitney won the Derby he was so honored. Such a contention is entirely without foundation.

The King's dinner is essentially given to friends—fellow-members of the Jockey Club—and if it happened that most of the owners whose horses took part in the race were present, it was merely because they happened also to be intimates of the King.
